"In this world, who can do a thing, will not;
And who would do it, cannot, I perceive:
Yet the will's somewhat—somewhat, too, the power—
And thus we half-men struggle."—BROWNING.

"If the sentence of a judge ever await anyone, to condemn him to hardships and punishments, let neither the penitentiary weary him with the manufacture of the raw material, nor let the ores dug from the mines hurt his hard hands; just let him compose a Lexicon. For why should I mention anything else? Surely, this single labour hath all the forms of torture."—SCALIGER.

"Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna."—HORACE.

"Above all things, Order and Distribution, and Singling out of Parts, is the life of Dispatch; So as the Distribution be not too subtil: For he that doth not divide, will never enter well into Business; And he that divideth too much, will never come out of it clearly."—BACON.

FOREWORD

TO
MY WIFE AND MY DAUGHTER
WITHOUT WHOSE INDEFATIGABLE ASSISTANCE
THIS WORK COULD NEVER HAVE SEEN THE LIGHT

FOREWORD

Now that this Index is passing through its later stages in the printer's hands I wish to write a few words in connection with it, principally in order that I may point out some of its many shortcomings. I shall try not to repeat unnecessarily what has been said in the Preface.

When, after the death of our parents, my brother suggested that I should undertake the completion of this Index and its preparation for press I was very reluctant to consent, for I considered that I was not competent to do justice to my father's book. But for various reasons it seemed desirable that the work should be done by me, so at length with great diffidence I agreed to attempt the task—a task which I have enjoyed greatly, partly for its own sake but even more because I have thought of it as a kind of small memorial to my parents.

I have often felt annoyed and ashamed when over-solicitous friends have expressed regret at my having embarked on such a relatively long piece of work ; for every time that my father sat down quietly to begin a fresh Part of The Best Books there was a longer stretch of work ahead of him than there was for me when I began in the summer of 1931, and all that he would say to my mother or to me was " Well now, my dear, I'm going to begin Vol. — and I'm simply going to grind at it for all I'm worth until it's done ".

I should like to mention that, though my brother has not referred in the Preface to his own share of work, he too took a part in the production of this edition of The Best Books. He was responsible for nearly all the work on Law in Class D and for a little on the Classics.

He has generously much over-praised my work which I fear must be considered as an unorthodox Index compiled by a semi-amateur. If my father, with his beautiful scholarship, his extremely wide knowledge of literature, and his " surpassing power " of seizing on the essential and discarding the unnecessary, had lived to write it, it would have been a far better Index. I have not had the skill to do it as he would have ; nor have I had the time to do it even so well as I could have done it under more favourable circumstances. For though the time which has elapsed since the appearance of Part V has seemed long to the forbearing subscribers it has seemed all too short to me. Throughout I have been conscious of the urgent necessity of saving time (in order that The Best Books might have its Index as soon as possible) and of saving space (i.e. the expense of paper and of printing). These two bugbears have been my constant companions.

In an early stage of this task it occurred to me that I was like a woman who was responsible for turning out an exceptionally large pudding—that I must see to it that all the ingredients had been collected together and that they were properly mixed. But if a pudding of this kind is to be made really well it should in its last stages be passed several times through a fine sieve. Unfortunately there has been no time for the complete fine-sifting of my pudding: about two-fifths of the manuscript had to go to the printer in March, 1934, without any chance of revision. Hence the Index lacks that uniformity and consistency of arrangement and treatment which everyone has a right to expect in a work of this kind. I have corrected some of the discrepancies of this sort when doing the proof-reading but to have corrected all would have meant unwarrantable expenditure of time and money; so, very regretfully, I have had to pass many of them over, though my aim—imperfectly carried out—has been never to do so when the meaning was at stake. I have endeavoured to get compactness with clarity, though sometimes perfect consistency has been sacrificed.

I have retained almost entirely the technique which my father created in his Indexes to the original The Best Books and A Reader's Guide. I doubt if I could ever have accomplished this work if I had not had these to point the way. Indeed, I should have done better if at the start I had studied his method even more closely. But this edition of The Best Books being approximately three and a half times as long as the longest of the earlier editions and containing a correspondingly larger number of books, I decided to lessen my work by omitting certain minor details of arrangement found in the previous Indexes. Even so this Index is more than four times as long as the longest of its predecessors. I have often expanded the treatment of Subject-headings, hoping to make them simpler for ready-reference. Again, there has not been time for me to check each page-number (as I believe he did) nor to check all the references to Dr. E. A. Baker's Guide to the Best Fiction, though I have checked a great many of them. On one point I have been particularly remiss: I have not always distinguished between "Works" (an author's complete works in one edition) and "Works" (an author's various works in various editions). To have rectified this careless oversight in the proof-reading stage would again have been an unjustifiable expenditure of time and money; a glance at the relevant page in the main work will make the meaning clear.

Amongst blunders in the indexing of personal names I wish to point out in especial one kind of mistake that I have sometimes made. It was my intention when entering names of persons of the same name, such as "James", to place first the names of persons known by their Christian names (sometimes followed by other distinguishing names). When I have failed to do this these names will be found after the surnames.

Again, when a Subject-heading consists of more than one word I have usually, rightly or wrongly, treated it as one word, but I have not invariably done this. One reason for this has been that special circumstances have sometimes seemed to need special treatment.

Although in some respects this edition of The Best Books has not been indexed quite so fully as the two previous bibliographies I know it will be found to have been indexed very fully: it was my father's intention not to add unnecessarily to the Subject-headings taken from the earlier (i.e. the less up-to-date) Parts. In much the greater number of cases I have given all the relevant page-numbers to each book; but sometimes I have omitted duplicate numbers when I knew they gave no additional information or when I knew the reader would find them at once under the appropriate Subject-headings. When there are two or more books written by one author on the same page, and no books by him on any other page, I have given the page-number only once.

I decided not to spend time in arranging page-numbers in numerical sequence or in searching for the principal entry in order to put it first—another way in which I have not been able to follow the example set by my father.

In his Preface to A Reader's Guide my father mentioned the great difficulty of "identifying all authors with all their works dealt with". I am confident that in spite of having spent many hundreds of hours on this side of the work alone I have nevertheless constantly failed. Without Sir C. T. Hagberg Wright's and Mr. C. J. Purnell's Catalogue to the London Library (1914) and its Supplement (1920)—books which it has been such an unfailing pleasure to me to use because they show what can be done by mortal man but which tantalize the humble toiler by setting up a standard to which few can dare aspire—and without The United States Catalog—that monumental example of women's ability to which my chivalrous father often drew attention—my position would have been hopeless.

Though, as has been said by my brother, I have been able to correct some mistakes which either my father or I found and a great many misprints, I have no doubt that others have escaped me and therefore appear again in the Index, and that fresh ones have come in. The major errors discovered have been enumerated in the Preface (p. xxii). When correcting misprints and minor errors I have often pointed out the fact by writing "misprinted" or "sic" in brackets after the correct name, title, or date; but sometimes, in the less important cases, I have contented myself with setting the error right without comment. (This is particularly the case with Oriental authors and titles and with Greek titles.) Therefore the reader must assume that when there is any real disagreement between the Index-version of an author's name, the title of his book or the dates of his birth and death, and the version in the book itself, the Index-version is the correct one. However, so far as titles of books are concerned this statement must be taken with extreme caution because I have throughout abbreviated words and cut short titles, as my father had done, in order to save space. Further, I have abbreviated in an inexpert and unsystematic manner: working always at top speed I have shortened words and especially titles automatically (sometimes to a point of mutilation) and often unnecessarily—a fact which I did not realize fully till I came to read the proofs—but which might mislead the unsuspecting reader. I have even been guilty of using "P'a" for "Philadelphia" as well as for "Pennsylvania". Again, allowance must be made for the sometimes unnecessary excision by the compositors of full-stops and apostrophes (which had been inserted to indicate that a word had been abbreviated) and of almost vitally important letters. On rare occasions I have gone so far as to modify titles of rank in order to save space.

My father was afraid that he had sometimes over-abbreviated in the text, and when I have felt that this has been the case with the titles of books I have often amplified them. I hope that the number of cases where neither the main book nor the Index makes the exact meaning clear will be found to be almost nil, and that such tiny typographical misprints as I have allowed to pass in the proofs will not interfere with the usefulness of the Index. In short, I have tried throughout to make use of the Index for elucidating any obscurities in the text, and to leave no obscurities in the Index which cannot be elucidated at once by looking up the reference in its context in the book. Moreover, although I have on rare occasions entered a man's name under a title which he afterwards obtained but under which he does not appear in the main book, no attempt has been made to do this systematically. I have not attempted to systematize the use of capital letters, nor the form of typography in certain of the less familiar languages though this sometimes differs in different parts of the book.

Unfortunately the book contains certain misprints in the cross-referencing of Subject-headings. Obviously it has not been in my power to set these right but the evil is mitigated by the fact that the Index, by assembling together the greater number of page-numbers of each separate Subject-heading, lessens the need for cross-references.

Let me urge upon the reader who is using The Best Books to search for what he wants in the Index in all possible places—under the names of authors and of editors, under all appropriate Subject-headings and under the titles of books. This point has been emphasized in the Preface (p. xxi). Sometimes the titles of books and the names of authors will be found, on reference to the main book, to include not only Texts and Translations but also what my father called Aids and Treatises; similarly, the heading Biography when applied to an author at times covers his Bibliography or his Letters.

The Subject-headings are an "open sesame" to the subject-matter of the book. The reader is recommended to make the fullest use of them. If, for example, he wants to find books on the Ethnology of a Country let him look under "Ethnology" and under the name of the Country; if books about a certain Philosopher let him turn up the particular man's name and also examine the pages treating of "Philosophy"; if books about some subject connected with Jews let him seek under the name of the subject and also under "Jews", "Hebrew" and "Semitic". I must draw attention to another important point in this connection: the reader must look for any Sub-heading that he is seeking amongst the pages mentioned at the beginning of the main Subject-heading (often preceded by the word "Generally") as well as at the Sub-headings that follow; these initial pages frequently include Sub-headings which sometimes occur again below with additional page-numbers.

As was the case in The Best Books and A Reader's Guide Subject-headings in the Index sometimes give the number of a page—with or without (n)—which, on being turned up, shows no corresponding Subject-heading: nevertheless if the page is scanned carefully it will be found to contain one or more books touching on the subject in question.

I have occasionally incorporated in the Index useful little bits of information which my father had entered in the margins of The Best Books. He no doubt did this "just in case"—as he would have said, with a quiet little laugh—there should some day be another edition from his own or some other hand.

Works of Fiction.—Mention is made in the Preface (p. xix) of my father's treatment of works of fiction. To prevent any possibility of confusion I will explain, in this connection, a step I have often taken in the hope that it will be of service to the reader. When in The Best Books my father referred to a writer of fiction he usually gave the number of the page in Dr. E. A. Baker's Guide to the Best Fiction (1913 edition) whereon this author's works of fiction appeared. If, on looking up the actual reference, I have found that only one work of fiction was ascribed to the author in question I have supplied the title of the work instead of merely saying—as The Best Books says—"Prose Fiction". I have occasionally filled in titles of books in a similar manner in connection with other branches of literature.

Pseudonyms.—When an author has a pseudonym his several writings sometimes appear in The Best Books under either the true name or the assumed name. I have usually brought all these books together, giving, of course, the author's alternative name in brackets. The reader must be prepared to find the particular book for which he is searching under either name in The Best Books. Again, because my father has given one pseudonym only it does not follow that the author had no other, e.g. Thackeray took at least three pseudonyms but my father gave only the one used for a particular book.

Oriental Names.—Pages xxi, xxii and xxiii of the Preface allude to the difficulties which have arisen in connection with the names of Oriental authors and their works. Although I have spent a very great deal of time on this part of the work I cannot claim that these names are always correctly transcribed. I have repeatedly turned to Mr. S. C. Coles for help and he has again and again given me most valuable assistance; but I have not done so always and he must not be considered as responsible for any errors. When I found that the highest authorities often differed as to the most correct renderings I realized that in trying to get the best transcriptions I was attempting the impossible: apparently there is no "best". I have usually left the names and titles as they appear on the actual books in question except when I have found some error requiring correction.

Order of Entries, etc.—The order of entries for any particular word is as follows:—

(1) Titles of works; in italic type. These are entered under the first word or the catch-word; they are limited to Anonymously-published Books the authors of which are unknown, not commonly known, or uncertain; and to Series of Books with a collective name. Quite unimportant anonymous books of which the titles sufficiently indicate their character are often not indexed at all as being more naturally sought under their Subjects. Entries of Series of Books are not always complete as regards page-numbers.

(2) Names of Societies, Towns, Corporations, etc., when appearing in the capacity of Producers of books; in Roman type. When these Societies, etc., appear as "Subjects" they are entered lower down as Subjects, in capital letters.

(3) Names of persons: when "Producers" (i.e. Authors, Editors, Translators) they are in Roman type; when "Subjects" they are in capital letters.

(4) Subjects; in capital letters.

Square Brackets.—When an author's name is in square brackets (unless it is an alternative name or gives other further information about the author) it indicates either that the author died before the book was published or that the book was written in his honour.

When the title of a book is in square brackets (unless it refers to a book which is one of a class of books that has just been mentioned, and unless it is part of another work) it indicates either that the book was published after the author's death or that it was written in his honour.

(n), (nn).—Much latitude is needed in interpreting the symbol (n). It stands for any reference to a subject, author, or book that is not a main entry in The Best Books in Roman or even larger type. It usually applies to a footnote or to a main entry in small type. It may mean, however, that one or more books on the page in question touch on the subject to which the page-number refers. (I fear that the (n) has sometimes been omitted from the page-numbers of main entries in small type in the four earlier volumes because this arrangement had not been finally adopted when some of these Subject-headings were “taken”.) (nn) indicates two or more examples.

Scheme of Abbreviations.—The following example shows the method adopted. Smith, John : Wks 2640 ; Poet. Wks 2891 ; Mankind 1050 (2) ; Studies 751 [Art of Writing 780, On Taste 170]. Biog. 2637.

A numeral in parentheses after a page-number represents the number of entries on that page of the book in question.

The meanings of all other technicalities in this Index are, I think, self-evident.

The abbreviations of Christian names are in accordance with what my father considered the most correct plan, i.e. never to use a full-stop when the last letter of a word is the same in the abbreviated as in the unabbreviated form of the word.

In addition to the books already mentioned by my brother or by me I should like to name two that have often helped me over difficult places. One is W. Davenport Adams's modest-looking little book Dictionary of English Literature ; the other is the Century Cyclopaedia of Names. I do not think either book is known sufficiently well, at least not in this country.

Reference has been made in the Preface to the help which I have received from personal friends and from other sources. I wish to tender to all these my very sincere thanks. I have valued exceedingly the way in which my appeals for assistance have been responded to. I have had to turn “this way and that way”—to Oxford, to Dublin, to Princeton, and to New York as well as to many persons in London—in my search for enlightenment (often respecting very irksome details) and I have almost invariably met with kindness and helpfulness. That this should have been so has added much to my pleasure in carrying out this work. I am very much indebted to Messrs Stephen Austin and Sons, the printers, not only for having followed complicated general instructions with fidelity and vigilance—constantly rectifying technical inaccuracies—but also for having shown me throughout the extreme of consideration and courtesy.

I shall be very grateful if readers will tell me of my mistakes (other than typographical ones) of which I know there must be many. I know there must be errors of commission and errors of omission, for all of which I am very sorry. I also much regret that this Index has been so long in appearing. If it had not been for the immense amount of careful, accurate, and exacting work done—so very gladly—by my mother this volume would not be nearly finished even now !

PREFACE

With the publication of the Index volume this great work is brought to a conclusion. In a very real sense it may be said to be a monument to a family. Some of my earliest recollections in the 1880's are of my father with scissors, paste, and pen, working away, day in, day out, at A Reader's Guide. Ever since the first inception of The Best Books, fifty years ago, it has, with rare intervals, been the centre of the family life. My mother was my father's constant assistant throughout the whole period, and my sister has devoted a large part of the last thirteen years to helping to the completion of the task which he had taken upon himself. My mother did all the preliminary work for the Indexes of the original *The Best Books*¹ and A Reader's Guide.²

The compilation of The Best Books would have been a remarkable achievement for one man had he been able to give all his time and his energies to it, to the exclusion of everything else. It is almost incredible that it should be the work of a man who from beginning to end was fully engaged during all the ordinary working hours on the business side of publishing, and who, night after night, would bring home the works of authors in need of his help in order that he might prepare their manuscripts for press. When he died of pneumonia at the age of 75, after just living to see the fulfilment of his purpose, letters flowed in testifying to his outstanding qualities as a publisher and to the help and encouragement which he had given to those whose books he published. "There was no English publisher," one of his leading confrères wrote, "whom I have met who had such a complete mastery of the many technicalities of his job. It was always a great joy to me to talk 'shop' with him."

For Messrs. Routledge he worked for nearly twenty-nine years as Senior Managing Director, and the Board expressed on his death their appreciation of the way in which he had raised the status of the business to that of a first-class publishing house.³ His death was a great blow to his partners and the whole staff was deeply grieved for they knew that he always had their interests at heart as well as those of the shareholders and that in losing him they lost a sympathetic friend and well-wisher.

The impression he left upon the authors whom he had helped is shown by such remarks as these, taken from letters which I received: "The kindness and helpfulness of your father in what was a difficult and heavy task (preparing a book on Imperial Economics) I shall always remember with gratitude," and "My obligations to your father were more than deep and they will last while life remains".

¹ The Best Books: 1st edition 1887; 2nd edition (recast and greatly enlarged) 1891, reissued 1891, 1896, 1901.

² A Reader's Guide (a supplement to The Best Books, bringing it up to date; in certain respects more comprehensive): 1st edition 1895; reprinted 1901.

Letters of condolence that poured in to the firm from authors and from business-houses contained innumerable references to his kindness, courtesy, straightforwardness, and striking personality. One eminent classical scholar wrote: "I do not think there was any man in London whom I so respected." (On a previous occasion this professor had dedicated one of his books to my father, closing with the quotation οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν ἄριστος ἀλλ' εἶναι θέλει.) "There goes a fine spirit!" wrote another.

Other distinguished authors paid in their tribute: "He was a man of very remarkable personality!"; "What a fine spirit of youth he retained!"; "His death will be a great loss to the publishing world and to the world of letters in this country"; "So striking a figure and one from whom one had so much consideration." Countless authors spoke of their sense of real personal loss: he had become not only their "good publisher" but also their "good friend".

One man who early in life had become a prominent author said: "I can never forget the goodwill he showed me, as a publisher, in my youth. . . . His memory will be cherished as one of the most intellectually enterprising publishers of our time." Indeed, he won the lasting gratitude of many a young author and literary writer; an acutely sensitive and tender-hearted man himself and a very open-minded one, he delighted in being able to help them with his sympathetic understanding and with advice drawn from his unequalled experience. He had a deep-seated love of sound work and was eager to pass on the torch of scholarship.

It has been said that he and the late Sir John Murray were the two most scholarly publishers of the day and his extraordinarily wide range of knowledge was a frequent subject of comment. It used to please him to know that he was considered the most "accessible" of publishers: times without number he would remain at the office long after office-hours in order that people who had come to see him might not be disappointed.

Throughout the trade he won an equal respect. One binder wrote: "I knew your late father for about forty years and had the greatest respect and esteem for him. I feel that I have lost a friend." Numberless business-houses testified in letters to the firm to the great regard in which he was held—not only English business-houses but continental houses and many American houses. One American publisher wrote that he had endeared himself as a man to all his colleagues in America. Another telegraphed: "A man of rarely fine qualities. . . . The book-world has lost one of the most distinguished men of our time." Expressions such as "so kindly, honourable, and courteous" and "a great figure in the publishing world" occurred over and over again. In writing of the relationship which existed between himself and my father, one prominent American publisher wrote: "It will tinge my remembrance of Mr. Stallybrass with colour for many years to come. Peace to his soul!" I cannot omit one further quotation, taken from a letter from an English Society: "Whenever anyone from this office had been to yours (Routledge's) he was always asked if he had seen Mr. Stallybrass, and 'Isn't he an old dear?' was a frequent comment." The letter goes on to speak of "the peculiar personal charm which we all recognized in him, a wonderful mixture of bibliographic erudition and sympathetic interest in our simple problems, of acute business common-sense and other-worldliness, of swift action, and courtly ease of manner."

Yet he not only found time to conduct a large publishing business with a profound attention to detail and a sympathetic interest in the private affairs of all those who worked for him, and also, as I have said, to prepare for the press—in after-office hours—the works of authors whose books he was publishing, but somehow or other he managed himself to give to the world several scholarly editions of classics such as Reynard the Fox and Esquemeling's Buccaneers. He also garnered together and to a considerable extent “worked up” much valuable material for books which he “hoped to finish some day”—as he would say with a rather rueful smile (as the years skipped by) but with a whimsical twinkle in his eye. All this would have been more than enough for any other man. Yet over and above it he was compiling The Best Books. Only those who have attempted work of the same kind can understand the immensity of the task. I do not think it could have been completed without the never-failing love and help of his wife and daughter. He would never voluntarily have relinquished his task, but at times it seemed as if his physical strength would not suffice and his spirits would be depressed. My mother, in her loving way, would then coax him into a happier frame of mind and recreate something of the old zest and enthusiasm. For that which had started as an enthusiasm had long before the end become a burdensome duty. Somehow or other he managed to perform that duty and he sent the last portion of Part V to the printer eight days before he died; but he did not live to see Part V through the press. The shock of his death killed my mother, who survived him only eight days. “They were lovely and pleasant in their lives and in their deaths they were not divided.” As one intimate friend wrote: “We who are left can look back on two inspiring memories. Their devotion to one another was a beautiful thing, and it is difficult to imagine one living without the other.”

All my life my memory is of my family working at The Best Books—my father consulting bibliographies, checking dates, making entries in his beautifully clear hand-writing into the early hours of the morning, and my mother working away at this great Index. For immediately after the appearance of Part I in 1910 my mother set to work numbering, cutting up slips, sorting them, and pasting them down on to lengthy strips of paper. From 1921 onwards she had the company and collaboration of my sister, both working regular hours every day; and so in a rough form the MS. of the Index for the first four volumes was ready when Part V went to press in 1931. There then remained the work of incorporating the material from Part V and of compressing and moulding the whole into its final form. In spite of ever-failing health my father fully intended to bend all his energies straightway towards accomplishing this purpose, and my mother—undaunted in spite of quite broken health and as young in spirit as he was—was looking forward greatly to beginning again, numbering, cutting up, rough-sorting, sub-sorting, and pasting down, for Part V as she had done for the first four volumes.

Since my parents' death the Index has filled my sister's life. Some idea of the hugeness of the task may be obtained when I say that now as I write, in September, she has just finished the manuscript upon which she has been at work for over thirty-six months. During those months she has done much more than 4,500 hours of work. These months do not include a long enforced rest due to eye-trouble, but they do include the prolonged convalescence when she was limited strictly as to hours of work. She has worked day after day with scarcely a Sunday's rest. And the arduous proof-reading—which must be done through a magnifying-glass—still lies ahead of her !

Fortunately she has inherited the tenacity and fixity of purpose of her father and mother, and has the same instinct for scholarly accuracy in detail as her father. In making this Index she has done a work which I think not many could have accomplished so well. Only a sense of devotion could have carried her through to the finish ; and no one who was not inspired by such personal devotion could have carried on to the end with such a high standard as she had set herself and at such pressure in order that publication might not be too long delayed. I must add that my sister has a special knowledge of the method upon which the book is based. It is clear that only a polymath could have compiled The Best Books : it is not equally obvious but it is equally true that only a polymath could have compiled the Index on such a scale. It will of course increase the usefulness of The Best Books manifold.

Let it not be thought that my father's life of unremitting industry was unhappy or dismal. Never was there a man of gayer spirit than he,¹ and the community of interest and work—shared joys and shared disappointments and sorrows—made the perfect foundation for family happiness. Easily as my father made friends with all sorts and conditions of men and women and children, no man's thoughts can ever have been more centred in his family. Their happiness was the dominating interest in his selfless life. One who worked with him for many years and is now himself passed from us wrote of my father and mother : “ Their charming old-fashioned affection for and courtesy to each other was delightful to witness, and neither would have survived the other,” whilst a learned scholar said : “ I have always felt the privilege of friendship with your father and mother and the example of their beautiful and useful lives has helped me and others exceedingly.” Another old friend who had known them intimately throughout their married life said : “ It seemed as if they were lovers always.”

They both lived very steadfast and courageous lives, never turning aside from the painful or unpleasant or difficult or dull, but always quietly doing what seemed at the time most important or necessary, thus helping many friends with their sympathy, generosity, and encouragement. They were alike in having great youthfulness of spirit ; one close friend wrote of my mother : “ She was so young in spirit and quite unforgettable ” ; another, writing of my father, said : “ It seemed that his lovely, youthful spirit was imperishable.” Each had an inextinguishable sense of humour and an inexhaustible store of quiet, patient courage.

And here I wish to touch on another side of my father's life in order to correct an impression which was abroad at the time of his death. It was suggested that he was or had been a Fabian. This was never the case. He did not take any part in politics. At one time he would have called himself a Liberal : but towards the close of his life a generous Conservatism appealed to him most. One intimate friend, describing my father to the outside world, wrote : “ Never caring for publicity he expended on the home-circle those treasures of knowledge and humour with which he was so richly endowed. He seemed to brighten and illuminate all around him." He had, indeed, a flashing wit and "the godlike quality of imagination and speculation" to a quite unusual degree, and with it all a great gentleness.

Perhaps the best picture of all is given by one who knew us well and has played many parts in public life with distinction: "I look back . . . to you four, each so much, and all together so thoroughly and so finely a family. . . . There was that intensity and that intimacy. I think of your father as I knew him then, sensitive and resolute, cautious and enterprising, talking and thoughtful, critical and yet entirely free from prejudice, trenchant and kind, a man of an unusual union of qualities, which was his touch of genius, and in all of them of great spirit. His active genius on the one side and on the other your mother's beautiful personality—her gifts of dignity and patience and practicality and thought and love, and the originality of her humour."

Such was the impression of a happy home created by the two persons who devoted so much of their lives to The Best Books. The present (and last) edition could never have been so fully completed with its indispensable Index but for the loving industry of my sister, who has made considerable sacrifices of health in order that subscribers may not find the utility of the work impaired by the lack of the final volume.

Mistakes — many mistakes — are inevitable in this edition of The Best Books. But subscribers who have been patient will also be kind when they think of the difficulties under which the book has been prepared. Not the least of those difficulties arose from my father's passionate desire to be of use to his country during the War; he became one of the original members of the National Guard, giving his services unstintingly throughout the War to soldiers home on leave, in the City during air-raids, and in the musketry-training of civilians.¹ But though there are mistakes, many corrected in the Index, those who know most and have most experience of such work will be those who will most admire the breadth of knowledge, the soundness of judgment, the gift for classification, and the general accuracy which my father brought to his work. It will be these, too, who will fully appreciate the magnitude of the task which my mother and sister performed in making the Index—in itself a work which has been spread intermittently over some twenty-four years and which requires gifts of scholarship of a high degree.

¹ It was during the War—in December 1917—that he changed his surname from Sonnenschein to Stallybrass (his mother's maiden-name). In the appreciative Obituary Notice in The Times after his death this date was given wrongly as 1915. Another inaccuracy, apparently, in this Notice was the description of his father as "a Kossuth rebel", meaning in his youth, when he left Austria. As both these statements have been reproduced in Mr. F. A. Mumby's interesting little book The House of Routledge (1934) I think it best to correct them here, unimportant though they are. My sister has made careful inquiry, but cannot discover why my grandfather's name should have been linked with that of the Hungarian patriot and statesman.

A letter from Professor J. H. Muirhead appeared in The Times a few days later. As a close and very old friend he drew attention to the idealistic side of my father's character, pointing out that he published the literature of the first Ethical Society (of which he was a member), it is believed at personal financial loss, and that in the same disinterested spirit he entered enthusiastically into the scheme for encouraging in this country the study of Philosophy—a subject in which he had always taken a genuine and deep interest—by producing the Library of Philosophy and by remaining loyal to it until it passed into the hands of Allen and Unwin. "Little as I know of the history of publication, I doubt whether idealism of this kind has been common in it; but it was characteristic of the man and I have ventured to think worthy of record in the attempt to do justice to his courageous life as a publisher and writer."

My father left many pencilled jottings of things that he wished to say in the Preface which he did not live to write. I have done my best to piece these together in order that those who use this book may know in substance what my father would have told them. His dedication to my mother and sister and some of the quotations which he had set aside to choose from (as in A Reader's Guide) appear in front of the Foreword.

First, then, he would have apologized for the delay in the completion of the work. "This book," he wrote, "has dragged its weary length along—until it has worn out the patience not only of the compiler, but, I fear, of the subscribers." But for the War, and his devotion to public service during it, the subscribers would not have had to wait so long for the completion of the stupendous task, and but for his deep sense of obligation to those subscribers my father would have long ago abandoned a work which taxed his physical resources more than is right for a man of the age to which he had attained when the War came to a close. But he did not take his hand from the plough, and he lived to complete his life-work. He had, however, come to feel that he had undertaken something which was beyond the powers of any one man. "The task," he wrote, "was possible in 1887 when I published the first edition. Each edition has become more impossible. Now it is almost absurd to attempt it."

My father was constantly obsessed by the delay in the progress of his work. An old writer said that "there is no workman that can both worken wel and hastilie", and my father knew that bibliography in particular "must be done at liesure parfaidlie". But he realized that it was even more important that the book should be completed betimes than that it should attain to that standard of perfection which he had set himself in the first edition. Many of the minor errors which were due to the sacrifice of perfection for speed have been set right by my sister in the Index. But even so twenty-one years separated the appearance of Part I from Part V. "The different parts of the book are not co-terminous as regards dates of publication. My endeavour throughout has been to make the book as useful as possible." And the elaborate system of cross-reference enabled my father in many cases to bring subjects dealt with in the earlier parts up to date in the later. In another jotting I find: "I hope to gain credit for what I have done, though I deserve discredit for what I have left undone." That credit will assuredly not be withheld by those who can appreciate the magnitude of the task.

The desire to make the book as useful as possible was my father's "acid test" for determining what were to be regarded as the "best" books. He endeavoured to compromise between the wants of the general reader who desires to make some detailed research, the scholar, and the bookseller, and was fearful lest his efforts to make the book very useful for booksellers might have spoilt it for the specialist, e.g. by the too lavish introduction of entries of school-books, etc., in some parts. But whilst the book is not primarily designed for experts, it was his hope that, if experts want to make an excursion into departments other than their own, they will find a list of the modern books which it will be necessary for them to read, to consult, or at any rate to know of, with their bibliographical details. And even in their own departments scholars will find the book a convenient aide-mémoire, and may find in it details for which they are looking.

For purposes of such general utility it was necessary that a very generous interpretation should be put upon the word "best". The books which are "best" in the stricter sense are marked with an asterisk. But even in the stricter sense a book may be "best" in its own department, and yet not necessarily very good. On some subjects there are no really good books; here "fairly good" = "best". Some books have been included more for the significance of their subjects or the rarity of literature concerning them than for their intrinsic merits. And it has been said that "the 'best' book is the book at hand that will give the answer to the particular question that is being asked". Occasionally my father would include a "largely read 'worst book'", warning the reader in a footnote that it was a book to be avoided!

My father aimed at including all modern books which "count", and others which, though not "counting", seem worth reading, if not for the use of possible readers, yet for that of possible writers. Such books have not always been entered in their logical places, e.g. Davenport Adams' Englishwomen of the Victorian Era is not in Class F, but in Class D, § 132 (Woman: Biography) where writers of similar books would probably first look, though other books of historical value dealing with women of history are placed throughout Class F, e.g. Mrs. M. A. E. Green's books. Again, books are included which, though not necessarily "best" to-day, were "best" in their own day. Wide as is the interpretation which my father placed upon "best", he believed that he had not included any books devoid of some interest to somebody, and claimed that at any rate he had not abused that poor adjective so much as is daily done by journalists and publishers in connection with what are termed "best-sellers"! But whilst a textbook of some science or art or a history or book of travel may be a "best" book, the "voice of authoritative criticism" can be heard only in the "literature of knowledge", not "of power" (to use Baconian language), and therefore but little attempt has been made to deal with works of modern Literature. But in standard English Literature of recognized merit, where rival editions existed, my father attempted to insert the various editions whether in print or out of print. And he wrote that he had included so many Anthologies in Class K, § 64, in order to let editors and publishers know that we want no more!

With regard to the branch of Literature which my father called Prose Fiction (and which is specially apt to be quite ephemeral), he has explained his method on pp. 2702, 2710, 2721. Here he advises the reader to consult in addition Dr. E. A. Baker's Guide to the Best Fiction. It should be noted that the many references to this Guide are to the edition published in 1913, not to the edition reset in 1932, after my father's death. In the cases of a few of the novelists not mentioned by our father, my sister decided to add in the Index the pages to be consulted in the Guide to the Best Fiction, thinking that their works may be more permanent.

He felt that there was a lack of perspective in the book, because all sense of proportion is lost when dealing with specialism, but he introduced Blue Books and experimental governmental publications sparingly.

Another problem which had to be faced was the question of the inclusion of books which were out of print or out of date. Here again utility rather than consistency was my father's aim. In the case of the more serious and learned books so many are out of print nowadays. The best books sell out and are not reprinted. Frequently publishers' catalogues contain many of the less good books only, the good books having sold out and not been reprinted. Sooner or later, when the costs of production are once more reduced, they may be reprinted. Further, "the wretched system of selling off 'remainders' within a year or two of first publication" not only thoroughly discourages possible buyers from purchasing but renders books out of print at a very early date. Many out-of-print books have, therefore, been included. Again, a good many of the older books which have been superseded are included (e.g. in Natural History) because they have some lasting value and are already in many libraries which are not rich enough to buy the modern books. And in particular my father intentionally retained a large selection of books edited by the older editors—"they are so often more scholarly and more lovingly edited than those by moderns." So George Gissing said: "In what modern edition shall I find such love and enthusiasm as glows in the annotations of old scholars? Even the best editions of our day have so much of the mere schoolbook; you feel so often that the man does not regard his author as literature, but simply as text. Pedant for pedant, the old is better than the new." On the other hand in Class H* (Medicine) and parts of Class I (Arts and Trades) the bibliography is limited to books in print or nearly so. The previous editions of The Best Books and A Reader's Guide can be consulted for earlier books.¹ Finally, a fuller treatment is given to the "new" subjects, e.g. Anthropometry and Psychology, than to others. In the various sections of Class K which deal with Modern Continental Literature a number of recent books still in print have been added. He was conscious that these sections were inadequate as regards the earlier books which are in print now.

Foreign books (unless available in translations) are in general outside the purview of the work, and have not been included. Any other policy would have rendered an already all but impossible task absolutely impossible. But exception has been made in a few cases (though he was aware that this plan had not been carried out altogether systematically), e.g. where there is no English book representative of the subject and in the case of certain monographs, etc. Thus in Class A, §§ 9-15 (Ethnic Theology), a few of the more important foreign editions of texts have been inserted, because there are none edited by Englishmen, and in many of the Philological sections of Class K, where books in the English language are very inadequate, a number of the best foreign works have been included.

Although the sub-title to The Best Books is very justly "A Contribution toward Systematic Bibliography" utility, rather than scientific perfection, was the object in the classification. It was ready reference at which my father aimed, and he did not claim to have been pedantically accurate in his sub-classifications. We have already seen that this principle was applied in the case of the biographies of women. So, again, texts have been included in A, §§ 9-15, under Judaism because they are of more interest there than they would be in Class K. The classification of Zoology, Botany, and Philology has not been altered, but is maintained as it was in The Best Books and A Reader's Guide.

¹ Persons interested in this book for its own sake, or out of regard for my father, would find his Prefaces to these two books worth reading.

Great difficulties present themselves in giving the dates of publication. When books are constantly being reprinted from stereotyped plates the dates of the latest reprint have not been given, but an endeavour has been made to do so where the date of a reprint is of importance. Many books are not dated: if only all publishers would issue Catalogues like those of the Oxford University Press or Macmillan & Co. the work of the modern English bibliographers would be vastly simplified. But difficulties are made to be overcome, and the dates of publication, even though not appearing on the title-page, have been given in nearly all cases, although often only approximately. An entry of a book ending thus: "Unwin [(87) (04)]" means that in both impressions no date of publication is given. For books published in the nineteenth century my father gave only the last two figures, e.g. 85 means 1885; for books in the earlier centuries he gave the dates in full. But the reader must be wary when he meets with figures between 00 and 30: they may refer to the nineteenth or to the twentieth century. (Part V was finished in January, 1931; therefore no dates after 1930 appear.)

The problem in connection with prices is even more difficult of solution. When The Best Books was first published prices remained reasonably stable. The War and the "Peace" after the War have changed all that. The prices given are those at which books were published on their first publication. So the American editions of Cambridge University Press books were originally published by Messrs. Putnam; they are now all published by Messrs. Macmillan, New York, and the prices have been raised: but Messrs. Putnam's prices are given. In some cases, indeed, owing to frequent changes the prices have not been given at all. In the case of Continental books it is impossible to give prices; therefore, so far as he was able, my father gave the number of pages. In Parts I and II my father stated when prices were "net"; but since shortly before the War nearly all books of any importance (other than school-books) have been "net", therefore he systematically omitted the word in Parts III, IV, and V.

He was fully conscious of the imperfections of Part V in particular. The need for speedy publication was not the only cause for these. The enormously increased cost of production after the War where only a small edition was needed made economy essential to a man of small means if his λειτουργία were to be performed at all. He cross-referenced very often instead of repeating the details, as other books dealing directly or indirectly with the same topic are thus indicated. He was obliged to condense—over-condense—his material in detail and in arrangement. And an even more extensive use is made of abbreviation than in the earlier editions. Indeed he often left in the text slight errors of which he was conscious to save the prohibitive cost of printer's corrections. These will frequently be found set right in the Index. It was for the same reason that Vols IV and V had to be priced more highly than the preceding volumes. Again, when entering a book he had to choose between entering it under the name of the book or of the author or of the editor. He had neither space nor time to adopt any other course. Therefore the reader is recommended to look under all these names and also under the appropriate Subject-headings before abandoning the quest for any special work. This suggestion applies to all five Parts, but my father most especially entered Oriental works very often under the title of the work only. A further word of caution may be helpful to the uninitiated with regard to these Oriental books. The author's names are frequently very lengthy and are not, of course, divisible into surname and Christian name (or names). An author may be known under one combination of names, or under another, or under a quite different name. It is obvious that my father had no time to regulate the arrangement of these names, but my sister—with the invaluable help of Mr. S. C. Coles—has endeavoured by cross-referencing to rectify this defect as much as possible: nevertheless, readers are advised to refer to alternative renderings of names and to titles of works.

The pitfalls in the way of the bibliographer are many. No doubt the bookseller cannot be forgiven who classed The Vicar of Wakefield under Lives of the Clergy, The Economy of Consumption under Medicine, Oscar Wilde's House of Pomegranates under Gardening or Arundines Cami (Latin translations of popular poems and nursery rhymes) under Ornithology. Nor is there any excuse for the Index entry of "Captive Planters" for the Captivi of Plautus, or an entry such as Caird's Critical Philosophy of Cant. But there are traps more difficult to avoid than these. Thus the Book of Deer is a memorial of the Monastery of Deer; and though a Roman priest published a book, the title-page of which set forth that it was a treatise on the tarantula spider, the book, when opened, proved to be, in great part, a discourse regarding the Holy Trinity. In spite of all possible care errors and mistakes inevitably creep in. My father intended to call attention in the Index to some "howlers" and egregious misprints. Some of these are now lost. In one case an entry appeared in the first proof as "by a pupil of Zeus" instead of "by a pupil of Zeuss", the Celtic philologist! That was noticed but others must have escaped detection. Fortunately my sister had made a note of some that annoyed him exceedingly. The date of the Rye House Plot appears as 1863 instead of 1683. He was so dumbfounded by this serious error that he made further investigations and found that, at any rate in one set of proofs, the date had appeared correctly: how calamity had overtaken it later was never discovered. Two other bad but amusing mistakes were the appearance of Gibbons' Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire as Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire, and of Gertrude Bell's The Desert and the Sown as The Desert and the Town! But faults of his own making were harder to forgive than a compositor's misprints and he was very distressed to find that on one occasion he had confused Isæos with Isaiah. To have confused New Granada with Granada was a bad slip though an intelligible one, but carelessly to have grouped the Bermudas, Labrador, and Cape Breton in the section dealing with Geology under the heading West Indies was an error beyond hope of forgiveness! Again, on p. 1982 (in Class H, § 99—Mammalia) the heading "South America" should be "America, Generally"; and § 33 in Class A (p. 98) should begin at the words "New Testament" instead of at "Commentaries, etc." The headline for Class K, § 160 should read "Australian Philology, etc. (incl. Maori and New Caledonia)"; again, when my father inserted in Old-English type the two headings "VIII: Iranic and Caucasian Folklore" (p. 387) and "XII: Chinese and Japanese Mythology and Folklore" (p. 395) he was thoughtlessly slipping back into the method of arrangement which he had adopted in the original The Best Books. Another blunder which has its amusing as well as its serious side was his inclusion of an anthology The Fragrance of Flowers in Botany!

It seems best to draw attention here to some errors in Part V. In the headings and headlines for K, §§ 18—23, the word “English” is used instead of “British”. Through careless printing and proof-reading the headlines between pp. 2799–2809 are “Nineteenth Century” instead of “Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries”. Another serious oversight is the omission of the important figure X before “Heretical Systems” on page 3017. Various other instances of bad printing and careless proof-reading have found their way in of which the following is a glaring example: on p. 2755 Reynard the Fox and Tyll Owlglass have the appearance of having been written by Erasmus!

Part V in particular suffered very much indeed from the fact that my father did not live to see it through the Press himself. This is true of the whole volume but especially is it the case with the Oriental Sections, where numerous typographical errors as to titles of books and authors’ names occur which might lead to confusion and which could not have escaped his own trained and very experienced eye. My sister has been at great pains to detect these and, with the help of Mr. S. C. Coles, to put them right in the Index: but she is conscious that doubtless some have remained unnoticed and therefore automatically reappear in the Index. In her Foreword she mentions further details in connection with corrections generally, and in connection with the transcription of Oriental names.

My father wished to call attention in the Preface to four minor points in the text: 8° throughout means Demy 8vo. The use of the colon is always for apposition. “Etc” is used, as being shorter and more generally intelligible than “et alii”. It is necessary also to distinguish between

“John Smith, M.A., etc. = and other degrees”,

“John Smith, etci = and other men writers in collaboration”.

and “Mary Smith, etcæ = and other women writers in collaboration.”

This last ruling, which represents a change in technique from that used in The Best Books and A Reader’s Guide, was not adopted till after the appearance of Parts I and II.

My father would have ended by expressing his thanks to numerous friends who had helped him in the preparation of his magnum opus, and in particular to Miss Werner, who gave him invaluable assistance in the extremely complicated section on African Philology. In his Compiler’s Note to Part III he wrote of his indebtedness to a great friend, Mr. T. F. Husband, I.S.O., M.A., who had embarked on the project of devoting his services to The Best Books, but whose generous intentions had been cut short almost at once, after a very promising start, by his sudden and tragic death in 1921.

He would have wished, too, to extend his very grateful thanks to the many friends who in one way or another have helped to make his daughter’s task easier—especially to Mrs J. F. Butterworth who, in the kindest way possible, gave her very substantial assistance by rough-sorting much the greater part of the entries from Part V, and to our all but life-long friend Mr. S. C. Woodhouse, to whose judgment and knowledge my sister has mercilessly laid claim, she tells me, time and again. The dates of birth and death for the older writers were taken from Hyamson’s Dictionary of Universal Biography and Beale’s Dictionary of Oriental Biography, edited by H. G. Keene. Both my father and my sister owe the greatest possible debt to the magnificent catalogues of the London Library.

But above all he would have expressed his sense of what he owed to the devoted labours of his wife and daughter, without whose continuous assistance he could never have brought his life-work to a conclusion. The Index is entirely the product of their industry. But he owed more to them than the Index and aid in the preparation of the volumes. As I have already said, only their constant interest and encouragement could have sustained him if his spirits and energy had flagged, or if the prospect of the vastness of the task which he had undertaken had been in danger of overwhelming him. His unbounded gratitude to them he would have expressed in that sincere and lucid style of which he was a master.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS, ETC.

[The Abbreviations, etc., refer to the main body of the book : they must not be taken to apply necessarily to the Index.]

DATES in the last column of the page are the dates of publication. In cases where more than one edition has appeared, the date of the first edition is put in square brackets, that following being the date of the last edition. In dates which represent the nineteenth century the first two figures are omitted, but previous centuries are given in full : the Preface (p. xxi) contains further information on this point.

PUBLISHERS' NAMES in parentheses after a non-English Town-name are the names of the London agents for the book in question.

AUTHORS' TITLES in square brackets imply that such titles were acquired after they had written the books named.

ADDRESSES OF BRITISH PUBLISHERS, LEARNED SOCIETIES, ETC.

TO WHOM INSUFFICIENT POSTAL ADDRESSES
ARE APPENDED IN THE BODY OF THIS WORK

The subjoined List has been prepared with the object of enabling inquirers to get into direct touch with the British Publishers or other producers of works referred to in the accompanying volumes, the term "other producers" connoting the old and recent Bookseller-publishers, the Printers, Private Presses, and Printing Clubs, the Learned and other Societies, and the Charitable, Religious, and Social Organizations that have sponsored the publication of books here entered; and while, from the nature of the subject, it cannot lay claim to completeness, all reasonable steps have been taken to make it as complete as possible.

In the earlier editions of The Best Books and A Reader's Guide 650 Publishers and Producers were listed. In the present edition we found that if we wanted to be "complete" our List would extend to some 2,400 entries, to a very large proportion of which it would be impossible to give any indication as to where the books to which they referred could be obtained. Publishers, like the rest of mankind, are mortal; they have their rising and their setting—though the latter in many happy and well-known cases is still in the future; and this remark applies with even greater force to the large number of Private Presses, Printing Clubs, and so forth that have from time to time done such excellent work: they come, and they go; and in their going many of them leave no trace beyond the publications with which they have enriched the literary or learned world. When it has been possible for us to record what has become of their stock, goodwill, name, or business-connection we have done so; in other cases we have been obliged to pass them by. When, therefore, the publications of firms, etc., the addresses of which are not here listed, are required we suggest that application should be made through the advertisement columns of the Trade Papers, or direct to one of the larger wholesale houses or antiquarian booksellers; and in the case of the publications of local Antiquarian, Scientific, or Historical Societies, etc., an inquiry directed to the Chief Librarian or to the Curator of the Museum at the appropriate town or county town would, in most cases, be the best initial step to take. No attempt has been made to include in this List the few societies to which reference has been made in the central portion of the pages of The Best Books. For publication-particulars regarding the books of foreign Publishers, Societies, etc., application should be made to any of the well-known Booksellers and Agents specializing in the sale of Continental and Oriental Books. It must also be borne in mind that this List has been compiled in connection with The Best Books ; persons who refer to it (possibly in connection with books not mentioned in The Best Books) must not assume that because the name of a Publisher is cross-referenced to that of a Society the Publisher published no other works. A few errors in names in The Best Books have been rectified here.

In addition to the large number of town, county, and local directories covering the whole of Great Britain and Ireland that have been consulted in the preparation of this List, we are indebted to the following for their assistance in the elucidation of many more or less obscure points :—
